ABOUT THE BOOK

Delly is a precocious, rowdy, and misunderstood fifth grader. Her new friend, Ferris Boyd, is a quiet, secretive girl—the exact opposite of Delly—and she has a special affinity with animals. Despite their differences, or maybe because of them, Delly and Ferris form a unique bond and discover that true friendship will help them deal with any challenges life throws at them.

2. Do you think Delly’s physical description matches her personality? How?
3. Think of some of Delly’s unique word combinations. What does she mean when she calls her Ma a “mysturiosity”? Why does she call Ferris Boyd’s treehouse a “hideawaysis”? Make up a word of your own by combining words that already exist.

Do you think that all of the adults in her life really gave up on her, or were they just frustrated? How do people’s reactions to Delly’s trouble make her feel?

8. What does RB suggest to help Delly stay out of trouble? Do you have a special trick of your own that keeps you out of trouble and calms you down when you're upset or angry?
9. Why doesn't Ferris Boyd take the ball and shoot during gym class? When Delly discovers the reason, what does it make her realize?
10. Why do you think Ferris Boyd communicates so well with animals? What special quality of hers do they respond to?
11. How do Ferris Boyd and Brud Kinney become friends? Why do they make such a good pair? How does Ferris Boyd's friendship with Brud differ from her friendship with Delly and RB?
12. How does RB surprise Delly throughout the story? Have you ever thought something about someone and realized later that you were wrong?
13. Why does Delly have a bad feeling when she first sees Ferris Boyd and Brud Kinney playing basketball together? Is she right to feel the way she does? How does the situation get worse before it gets better?
